Head Hi is pleased to present Down to Earth, a group exhibition of sustainably minded artists and poets. Featuring works from Eric Santoscoy Mckillip, Jessica Niello-White, Neta Bar-Zion, Daniel Barragán, B. Thom Stevenson, Leah Marjanne Romero, Devin Johnson, and Moch Hahn, Down to Earth highlights artistic perseverance in the face of constant environmental concern. The exhibition collectively aims to celebrate the support of our planet's future through the artists' exploration of earth's materials and omniscient influence.

From artists like Moch Hahn, who investigates the subject of the discarded by making sculptures from both sourced and found objects, to B. Thom Stevenson whose graphic, punk rock approach to painting yells with humor, aggression, and resistance, the featured artworks build upon each other to present a down to earth reality of our current fragile relationship with mother nature.

We hope that the visual content of these issues can lay the groundwork for sustainable ideas to take hold and thus create a platform for dialogue, meaning, and further reading. During the exhibition a special pairing of books selected by Head Hi and the participating artists will be for sale.

Down to Earth is a collaborative effort between curator Daniel Barragán and Head Hi founders Alexandra Hodkowski and Mösko. The opening reception will include a performance and reading by Isabelle Brouman.
